INCOME TAX HIKE IS BEATEN

Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

EMORY THOMPSON'S state income tax revision bill went down to defeat today in the senate, after having previously passed the house. Senator John Wilson sponsored it in the upper chamber, but was beaten. I think Thompson's and Wilson's fight will be justified in the next few years.

Legalization Near as Liquor Bills Pass Both Houses

But House and Senate Must Adjust Their Different Provisions

NO, FOR HEMPSTEAD

Wilson, Pilkinton and Thompson Vote Against Legalization

LITTLE ROCK.—The status of liquor in Arkansas, as a result of actions Monday by the governor, the house and the senate, is this:

Wine of any alcoholic content manufactured in Arkansas may be sold legally under an act signed by the governor.

Sale of all other alcoholic beverages in unbroken packages by licensed dealers was approved by the senate, which also adopted an emergency clause to make the measure effective as soon as it becomes an act.

A similar bill was passed by the house, without the emergency clause, but the way was left open for reconsideration of the negative vote on the emergency clause.

Before sale of liquor becomes legalized, however, the house must pass the senate bill or the senate must pass the house bill. The measures generally are alike, differing only in details.

If the house bill as it now stands, without the emergency clause, is passed by the senate and signed by the governor, it will not become a law for 90 days, and in the interim six percent of the voters of the state may initiate a vote on the measure at the next general election in November of 1936.

If the senate bill as it stands is passed by the house, with the emergency clause, the act becomes effective at once with the signature of the governor, which is assured.

People Could Vote

However, 15 percent of the legal voters of the state may initiate a vote on the emergency legislation, although it is already in effect, and if a majority of the electors should vote against it, it would be repealed.

The earliest that any conclusive action can be taken on a liquor bill will be Wednesday. Either branch could read the bill from the other branch twice Tuesday, amend it, and make it a special order for Wednesday.

Indications are that one of two procedures will be followed:

Sponsors of the measure in both houses may hold a conference and decide which of the two bills shall be called up for passage in the other house.

Or amendments may be agreed upon to make both bills identical and both called up for passage. Amendments by either branch would mean the bill would have to go back to the other branch for concurrence in the amendments and another roll call on the amended measure.

Ophion Given

The question of initiating a statewide referendum on the liquor bill became an issue in the house debate.

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS:

NEG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

But we have been talking about this for a long, long time—and the years have gone by, and Arkansas has done nothing about it.

And that's why we are today advocating a higher state income tax rate. Because no matter what a piece of property is down on the assessment list for, its rent-revenue will be taxed under an income law.

The only trouble is that the present rate isn't high enough to do much good.

There was an increase of only 9.5 per cent in traffic deaths in states with efficiently administered drivers' license laws, as compared with the national average of 13.3.

Light Vote Polled Tuesday; Total of 500 Is Forecast

Only 312 Ballots Voted Up to 2 p. m., Star Survey Discloses

WARD 4 IS VOTING

Star Apologizes for Oversight in Listing Polling Places

A light vote, with a possibility of the total not exceeding 500, was being polled Tuesday in the city Democratic run-off primary.

Only 312 persons had voted at 2 p. m., a tabulation taken by The Star showed.

In the preferential primary two weeks ago the city cast a total vote of approximately 900.

The vote by Wards at 2 p. m.: Ward One—Arkansas Bank building, 123.

Ward Two—Frisco depot, 83. Ward Three—556 Service Station, 74. Ward Four—City hall, 32.

Aldermanic posts are at stake in the first three wards. The nomination of an alderman in Ward Four has already been determined, Charles Freibolt, the runner-up, having conceded the race to Charles Taylor who barely missed a majority in the first election.

Voters in Ward Four, however, are entitled to poll their vote for candidates in the other wards.

Through an oversight The Star yesterday failed to list the Ward Four voting place. In recent years the election rules have been changed, voters now casting their ballot for aldermen in all wards instead of merely for the candidates in their own ward.

The Star apologizes for an error.

2-Bale Exemption May Be Allowed

Congress Favors It—But AAA Fears Loss of Control Program

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The house agriculture committee Monday moved to include tenant farmers and sharecroppers in the two-bale exemption proposed for small cotton farmers under the Bankhead control act, after hearing Farm Administration Adjustment officials argue such a policy would destroy the program.

Cully A. Cobb, AAA cotton chief, told the committee the administration thought best to apply the exemption only to small farmers owning their own farms, adding that to include sharecroppers and tenants working on the farms of landlords would complicate administration of the act.

Members of the committee contended sharecroppers and tenants were as much individual farmers as small producers who own their land and should be entitled to the exemption.

Cobb explained the AAA made cotton allotments on the basis of farms and not farmers. Under this plan, allotments to farms operated by tenants or sharecroppers are made on the basis of the farm being considered as a whole.

He said the two-bale exemption for the independent small producers would make approximately 250,000 bales of cotton exempt from the Bankhead cotton tax while to include sharecroppers and tenants would boost the total to around 1,250,000 bales.

This balance will have to come from the allotment of growers who have been producing in excess of two bales in the past, he said, asserting that if sharecroppers and tenants were included it would "destroy the program."

"If we enlarge the exemption beyond the present plan, somebody will have to give up a lot of cotton in their allotments," Cobb said.

Liquor Legalization Is Under Way in Four Southern States

Arkansas, West Virginia, Texas and Georgia Take Action—Alabama Voting on Question Tuesday

By the Associated Press

Repealists chalked up victories in four states Tuesday while Alabama decided what to do with its 20-year-old dry laws.

Three questions, including modification of the present laws, the manufacture and sale of beer and wine, and the manufacture and sale of hard liquor, were before the Alabama electorate.

Governor H. G. Crump, of West Virginia, Monday night signed that state's liquor control bill, creating a state monopoly, effective March 1.

The Texas state senate committee on constitutional amendments approved a proposed constitutional amendment to eliminate Texas' 16-year-old prohibition clause. The amendment would authorize the legislature to regulate the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor.

The Georgia house late Monday approved a bill providing for a referendum and local option.

The South and North Carolina legislative bodies are working on the liquor question.

Hope Wins Over Waldo 37 to 29

DeQueen Here Tuesday for Last Game Before District Tourney

A second-half drive, characteristic of the Bobcat basketball team this season, enabled Hope to even a four-game series with Waldo here Monday night.

The score was Hope 37, Waldo 29. DeQueen High School will play the Bobcats Tuesday night at the high school gymnasium. It will be the final game for Hope before entering the district tournament here Friday and Saturday.

The game, played before a small crowd Monday night, was hard-fought all the way. The first period ended in a deadlock, 11-11. Waldo went ahead in the second quarter and was leading by a five-point margin, 19 to 14, at the half.

Hope overtook the visitors in the third period, which ended with Hope leading, 26 to 23. Accurate tossing enabled the Bobcats to widen their margin in the final quarter.

Reese of Hope led in individual scoring with 13 points. The lineups:

Unemployed Total About 11 Million

Compares With 50 1/2 Million for All American Workers

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—A New Deal estimate of the number of unemployed—the first such compilation since President Roosevelt took office—Monday placed at 10,830,000 the number out of work in December, 1934. This disagreed by a half million with the compilation by the American Federation of Labor that 11,228,000 persons were unemployed at that time.

The figures were released without comment as part of a 68-page report on operation of the National Industrial Recovery Act. They were attributed to the National Emergency Council, but officials said they should be taken as a somewhat informal presentation.

The council figures showed that since December, 1930, the number of persons in the United States available for employment has increased 1,678,000 to a total of 50,426,000. The gain resulted from the normal increase in population.

Ford Is Invited to Bid on CCC Trucks

Feud Between Manufacturer and NRA Is Brought to End

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—As a step toward ending the one-time feud between Henry Ford and the NRA, the War Department Monday sent the Detroit manufacturer an invitation to bid on 4,910 trucks and cars to cost around $4,000,000.

Because he had declined to sign the NRA automobile code, Ford for many months was not invited to bid on government purchases, or his bids were thrown out. He was invited along with the code signers, Monday, to submit figures on the present batch of cars to be used by the Civilian Conservation Corps.

Radishes Believed Safe as Mercury Falls to 26 Here

Fate of Early Truck Crops to Be Decided by Wednesday

FAIR AND WARMER

Mercury Misses Predicted Low of 20 Degrees by 6 Points

The Hempstead county radish crop as a whole was undamaged by the cold wave that struck this area Monday night, growers and truck buyers were inclined to believe Tuesday.

Growers were optimistic, although the real extent of damage to advanced radishes, if any, cannot be determined until late Tuesday or possibly Wednesday.

The new wintry thrust sent the mercury to a low of 26 degrees Monday night, the Fruit and Truck Branch Experiment station reported. The forecast had been for 18 to 20.

The forecast for Tuesday night is fair and not so cold.

Missing Bostonian Is Discovered Safe

Gulesian, Amnesia Victim, Found at Scene of His Boyhood

NEWTON, Mass.—(AP)—Moses H. Gulesian, 71, former millionaire Boston and Newton real estate dealer, missing since last Tuesday, returned safely to his Newton home this Tuesday after being located Monday night in a Bowery mission, New York City, where he was given his first shelter upon his arrival in this country as an immigrant 52 years ago.

Gulesian's son-in-law said he obviously was an amnesia victim.

Gulesian was met at the south station by his wife, Mrs. Grace W. Gulesian, and his son-in-law and daughter Mr. and Mrs. James L. Beck of Newton. He arrived at 6:50 a. m.

Beck said his father-in-law had been placed on a Boston-bound train by officials of the Bowery mission, and made the trip to Boston unaccompanied.

He said Gulesian was obviously a victim of amnesia. He could give no account of his movements since leaving Boston last Tuesday. The son-in-law explained that he apparently "did not come to until he told officials his name in the Bowery mission."

Beck said the family did not want to question him as he was in a weakened condition. A physician was summoned to examine him.

Gulesian disappeared after attending a dinner at the University Club. His abandoned automobile was found the next day near the club.

Federal, state and local police immediately began investigating on the theory he had been kidnapped, was a victim of amnesia or was a suicide.

His wife, however, discounted the theory he was a suicide, and from the time of his disappearance was convinced he was a victim of amnesia.

Gulesian, himself, later explained that the mission in which he was located was the same one in which he had been given shelter upon his arrival in this country 52 years ago. He said he regained his memory after hearing a pianist at the mission play a composition entitled "Washington," which had been composed by his wife.

He had asked the pianist to play the music after he had heard her playing it, he said, as soon as he "came to," he said, he told officials of the mission who he was.

Detroit School Is Destroyed by Fire

16 Houses Abandoned as Million-Dollar Fire Spreads

DETROIT.—(AP)—Sixty families fled to safety Tuesday when fire destroyed Western high school.

H. B. Dolan Detroit school board superintendent of engineering said the loss would be $1,000,000.

Piremen, responding to five alarms, ordered occupants of 16 nearby houses into the streets and a 48-apartment building was evacuated.

The police arson squad considered the theory that a short circuit may have caused the fire.

CIGARETTE BILL UP

Senate Opens Debate on Proposal to Cut Tax to 3 Cents

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Proposed drastic increases in the state income tax rates were turned down sharply Tuesday by the senate.

By a vote of 22 to 7 the upper branch defeated a house bill by Thompson of Hempstead which sought to lower exemptions for both single and married persons by $500, and increase rates in the upper brackets.

Senator John L. Wilson, of Hope, brought up the measure in the senate and voted aye.

There was no debate on the measure, the matter having had a hearing in committee Monday night and being returned Tuesday with an unfavorable recommendation.

The senate began consideration of a bill to reduce the cigarette tax from 5 to 3 cents per package of 20, for the second time, shortly before the noon recess.

The discussion was to be resumed during the afternoon.

Reject Tax Hike

LITTLE ROCK.—The senate revenue and taxation committee voted Monday night that H. B. 208 (Thompson of Hempstead), which would amend the state income tax law, be returned to the senate with a recommendation that it be not passed.

The measure was offered by Senator Lake, seconded by Senator Fagan.

The bill has been passed by the house.

The meeting was attended by many business men opposed to the bill and by Representative E. A. Thompson of Hempstead county, sponsor of the measure.

Mr. Thompson said the bill was intended purely to raise money for the building fund of the State Hospital for Nervous Diseases and for the schools. The bill would reduce exemptions and increase penalties of employers on income-producing figures, which, he said, indicated that of 30 state that have income tax laws, all have rates higher in some respect than his proposed measure. Of the 30 two-thirds have a higher income tax in most respects, and a few are higher in all respects.

Dudley Haddock, secretary of the Arkansas State Chamber of Commerce, said that H. B. 208, president of the Little Rock Chamber of Commerce, and Judge Culbert L. Pierce of Searcy spoke in opposition to the measure.

Judge Pierce said residents of Arkansas are opposed to any increase in taxes and are looking to the legislature to reduce administrative expenditures rather than to increase taxation.

Mr. Haddock said Arkansas has the highest inheritance tax in the nation in addition to taxes mentioned by Judge Pierce.

Mr. Tucker said merchants of the state are opposed to the measure, because they are not able to bear an additional tax. He pointed out that the proposed sales tax is in reality an income tax.

Other Committee Activities

S. B. 134 (Dillon and Levine), a bill legalizing slot machines and prescribing a tax on their operation, was given an unfavorable recommendation.

A bill by Senator Evans providing for a two per cent tax on the salaries of all public officials and employees whose annual salaries amount to more than $500 will be reported without recommendation.

Postpones Action

S. B. 336 (Barney and Shaver) would provide "almost an open door for the worst kind of political domination" of the fire insurance business in Arkansas, Gilbert Leigh, Little Rock general agent, told the Senate Insurance Committee last night. The committee

Improvement on Chevrolet Truck

New Mechanical Features and Wide Variety of Body Designs

Improved commercial car models having more power, higher torque or pulling ability, greatly increased braking efficiency, and numerous improvements in engine and chassis, improvement in engine and chassis, let Motor Company.

In addition to the 1/2-ton trucks of 112-inch wheelbase and the 1 1/2-ton trucks of either 131-inch or 156-inch wheelbase, Chevrolet this year features a new unit, the Standard sedan delivery, intended for the fast dispatch of light merchandise. A wide variety of factory-built bodies, designed to meet the special requirements of different industries and trades, is available. Prices remain at the low levels established last year, when Chevrolet led the industry in truck registrations. The chassis prices, according to the Chevrolet announcement, are the lowest in the world.

The Chevrolet models for 1935 retain the general characteristics of the previous line in layout and design; mechanically, however, they incorporate many refinements and added features.

Changes in the engines include improved spark advance control, heavier crankshaft with improved counterweighting and harmonic balancer, selective balancing of rotating parts, high pressure oil stream lubrication to connecting rod bearings, increased oil pump capacity, electro-plated pistons, greater water pump capacity, and improved cylinder-head temperature distribution.

Brakes and braking have been greatly increased in efficiency and ease of operation, now possessing such features as lighter pedal pressure, higher coefficient of friction in the lining, limited articulation of brake shoes, and increased life of linings. As a result, the new trucks can be stopped in half the distance formerly required.

Improvements in manifold, carburetion, timing and valves, through the adoption of the Chevrolet Blue Flame design of the Master engine for this year's truck engine has resulted in a horsepower capacity of 70 in the 1935 trucks, a gain of 10 horsepower over last year. Maximum pulling power is developed, with 150 foot pounds torque, at low engine speeds, corresponding to 17 to 24 m. p. h. speed range.

A new system of lubrication serves the crank-pin bearings of the connecting rods. The oil pump forces high-pressure jets of oil to flow constantly from six nozzles, one in each oil trough, directed upward so that the streams are in the paths of the connecting rod dipper as they approach and pass bottom dead center. These dipper thus receive oil during a prolonged period of each revolution. The high velocity of the dipper against the stream of oil, added to the velocity of the jets, builds up a tremendous pressure that insures a copious supply of oil to the bearing.

Oil dilution is prevented by a patented crankcase ventilator which discharges gasoline fumes and vapors into the air stream underneath the oil pan. The feature of the ventilator is that heavy oil vapors are trapped and condensed, to return to the crankcase, as a measure of economy.

An important contribution to smooth engine performance is the use of engine-compensated pistons, which considerably shortens the period for the proper breaking-in of the engine.

In the 1 1/2-ton model, smoother operation is procured through the adoption of a new waded driven plate that eliminates chatter even at light driving load applications (as when the clutch is only partly released in parking maneuvers).

Revisions of springing have been made in the various models to provide for a wide variation of the load, and for greater strength. Heavier auxiliary springs of greater capacity, available for the 1 1/2-ton truck, permit this unit to be operated with a greater increased pay load. The 1 1/2-ton model springs are lighter than formerly, to provide easy riding for the safe transportation of light or fragile merchandise.

The new sedan delivery on the New Standard chassis, having a Fisher body of the same size and appearance as the Standard sedan, with no-draft ventilation, is announced by Chevrolet as the lowest priced enclosed commercial car on the market. It was designed especially to provide economical fast delivery service for merchants and businesses handling light merchandise.

YOUR HEALTH

Check Serious Illness With Thermometer

Every family in which there are children ought to have a fever thermometer.

With it, you might worry a good deal by occasional illness in which the temperature is above normal and in which there is nothing seriously wrong. But you will also detect many conditions in their earliest stages and by calling a physician promptly, you will save yourself a great deal of prolonged illness and serious complications.

Apparently the first man to measure temperature was an Italian named Sanctorius, who developed a thermometer. After he built his thermometer, which was an exceedingly bulky instrument, it occurred to him to measure the heat of the body.

About 1714, Fahrenheit invented the thermometer used in this country, the mercury thermometer with the Fahrenheit scale.

As late as 1870, thermometers used in measuring fever were about 10 inches long, were placed under the arm and took 5 minutes to register. The modern compact fever thermometer, used in the mouth and other cavities of the body, is a much more recent invention.

In the case of small babies the temperature should always be taken in the rectum, rather than in the mouth. The normal temperature as taken in the rectum varies between 98 and 99.6.

You should always be sure that the mercury is well shaken down before putting the thermometer into the body.

In taking temperature in the rectum, a special thermometer with a blunt tip is used. The child is placed face downward, preferably on the mother's lap. The thermometer, well greased with vaseline, cold cream or petrolatum, should then be placed in the rectum and held in position until removed.

The mother should not go away and leave the child with the thermometer in place, because the child may turn and break the thermometer and seriously injure itself. Neither should the thermometer ever be placed in the rectum with the child lying on its back.

After the thermometer is used, it should be washed thoroughly with soap and water, then placed in alcohol for 5 minutes, dried and returned to its case. Never wash a fever thermometer with hot water. This may break it.

A BOOK A DAY

A Quiet Little Man Who Slept His Wife

A murder case like the famous Snyder-Gray affair looks unutterably mean, sordid, and stupid to the outsider. We forget that beneath each case there is a personal tragedy—a built-up tension of unendurable emotions which culminate in violence and which, however they look to the public, are not in the least shoddy to the principals.

You get a reminder of this in Catherine Meadows' new novel, "Dr. Man."

Man Meadows has written a fictionalized version of the notorious case of Dr. Crippen—that quiet little Englishman who killed his wife, buried her body in his cellar, fled to America and became famous through being the first fugitive criminal to be caught because of the wireless telegraph.

Objectively, this is a typical murder sensation—grubby, mean, grotesquely bizarre. But Miss Meadows gives it dignity by showing it to us through the eyes of the little doctor himself, and by understanding how a quiet, inoffensive man can be goaded and driven to a point where murder seems his only solution.

How closely she follows the actual personalities I know not. She makes her doctor a meek, well-meaning chap, his stenographer-inamorata a mouse-like girl who innocently entangled herself in disaster, and his wife one of these female hellions for whom murder is too good.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Young Children Should Be Spared Dread of Future

We had a teacher in school who had a pet way of torturing us. She would say: "Just you wait until you get into Miss Cross' room. SHE won't stand for any nonsense." Or "If you think this arithmetic is hard just wait till you get into Number Ten and see what it is like there."

The result was that when promotion time came half of us went home and got very sick, too sick to expose ourselves to the rigors of Number Ten, and the other half got paralysis of the brain, and Miss Cross (who turned out to be a very nice teacher) must have thought for a week or two that she had received a crop of the world's worst dummies.

No child can think or behave normally if fear of the future occupies his mind. Fear of the future may mean daddy coming home at night. It may mean tomorrow with a two-much-discussed operation. It may mean all tomorrows with parents separated and a feeling of insecurity.

Trying to Learn Future
There is in all human beings this instinct of fear concerning the future. The psychological reason that lies behind the fear for going to fortune-tellers is the desire to save one's self from shock. To know the worst and prepare for it. Better, they argue, to know the worst than to be filled with vague uncertainty and forebodings. On the other hand, many believers won't go because they feel safer without concrete predictions.

It is not necessary to deceive the child and let him think that every day will be a rose-picking party, but why worry him unnecessarily about that bugaboo just around the corner?

A little girl playing at a neighbor's house one day acted very strangely. She did not want to play. She lay down on the floor and watched the other two listlessly for a while and my friend came in and found her.

"Are you sick, dear?" she asked. "I think you had better go home and let your mama put you to bed."

"I'm not sick," said Mary. "I don't want to go home."

There she stayed with her thumb in her mouth, a thing the lady had never seen her do before.

Dread Says Vitality
Later her maid told her.

"Lizzie over at the Smith's says Mr. and Mrs. had another awful fight. She says she is going to leave him. And he told her if she left and took Mary they would starve to death. But they'll patch it up again like they always do and none the worse," says Lizzie. They'll be as sweet as two turtle doves by tonight."

These are the almost wicked things we allow to ruin our children's happiness. If enough such experiences occur in their lives the effect is bound to be ruinous.

Telling a little boy or girl "to wait until your daddy comes home" is cruel and unkind. The weary hours of waiting for undecidable fate will often put the offender to bed, sick physically as well as mentally.

A child can acquire the habit of dread even when there is nothing to worry about. Dread says everything good in us and atrophies thought. The efficient child, or adult either, is one who does not live under a mythical Damocles' sword. There will be real swords enough.

Change Coiffure Gradually

Right now is a splendid time to change your coiffure. A new one will help to brighten up your outlook these late winter days and, if you decide on it immediately, you'll have a chance to get used to it before the Easter holidays.

Dread of a feeling of strangeness probably is the main reason that women go on wearing their hair the same way, year after year. The old style by Laura Lu Brookman © 1935 NEA SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Gale Henderson, pretty and 24, works in a silk mill. She and her 10-year-old brother, Phil, support their mother, Mrs. STEVE HENDERSON, who also works in the mill, asks Gale to marry him. She delays giving her answer.

Gale goes skating, breaks through the ice and is rescued by BRUCE WESTBROOK, whose father, now dead, built the mill. Brian has come home after two years in wars, ready to take his place in the mill.

VICKY THATCHER, daughter of LUTHER THATCHER, general manager of the mill, schemes to captivate Brian. She sees him with Gale and is furious. Convinced that Vicky and Brian are engaged to be married, Gale, believing Brian has been unfaithful to her, refuses to see him again.

Steve asks Gale to go to a dance. She declines to tell him she will marry him.

NOW COMES WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXV
IT was 10 o'clock and the dance at Parkers' was in full swing. Millie Saunders, in her red blouse, head bent, swaying slightly, was pounding shrill notes of relentless rhythm from the battered piano. Roy Purdy's violin joined in, none too steadily, but Tony Mille's accordion was faithful. Tony himself, hobnobbing like a top, nudged at everyone.

Couples circled the floor, some with heads close together, scarcely moving, others whirling and dipping, still others hopping grotesquely. The dancers swayed and jostled and got in each other's way, but managed to get on again.

A lad who evidently fancied himself as a dancer caught up a bunch of music from the piano, held it funnel-shaped to his lips like a megaphone and sang the words of the tune Millie was playing:

"Sweetie Pie—
Little bit nice and little bit naughty.
Little bit proud and little bit naughty."

Someone caught the megaphone and the crooner tried to recapture it. There was a scuffle, ending in loud laughter. Gale, dancing with Steve asked, "What's going on?"

"Nothing," Steve said. "Just Ted Felsbie clowning around the way he always does."

A couple danced toward them and the girl, dished her hand from her partner's shoulder, waved. It was Josie and a ruddy-faced youth with small, good-natured eyes. She was wearing the brown dress with the new plaid collar. She called out, "Where're you, Gale? I've been looking for you all evening?"

"We only came a little while ago," Gale told her.

"Some dance, isn't it?" Josie grinned. "Everybody's here—"

Other dancers came between them, separating them. Katie Schantz and her young husband passed, looking so happy that Gale smiled. Katie saw her and smiled back.

GALE started to say, "Steve, I think—" but a black-eyed youth with dark hair plastered back severely, cut in and took her away so that she could not finish the sentence.

The black-haired youth was a better dancer than Steve, who knew two or three simple steps and never varied them. Gale and her new partner circled the floor twice before the music stopped.

"Say, you can dance!" the dark youth said, clapping vigorously for an encore.

"Not very well," Gale told him. "I don't dance often enough. But you're an expert."

The clapping subsided. There was not, apparently, to be an encore. The young man asked, "How about something to drink? There's a place across the street—"

"No, thanks," Gale had halted, was looking across the room. "I think I see my brother." She went on. "If you'll excuse me—"

She crossed the room to where Phil was talking earnestly to the girl beside him—Ruby Griffith wearing a bright green, sleeveless dress and shimmering green earrings.

"Hello," Gale included the other girl in her greeting. "I didn't know you were coming to the dance tonight, Phil. Why didn't you tell me?"

Phil's face was flushed and his words were not as distinct as they should have been. "Didn't know it myself," he said. "Decided on—spurt of the moment. Why didn't you tell me you were coming?"

"But I did. Don't you remember?"

"Must be mistaken. Must have been two other fellows!" Phil laughed and Ruby joined in as though the words were some hilarious jest.

"Honest, Phil," she said, "you're a scream. Isn't he though?" She turned to Gale. "Isn't he just the limit?"

"I don't think so," Gale told her. "I think—"

SHE heard someone behind her and turned. It was Steve. He said, "Been looking for you, Gale. Thought I'd lost you. Hello, Phil. Hello, Ruby."

"Hello," Ruby Griffith said, her eyes on Steve's. "I'm surprised to see you here."

"Why?"

"Oh—just surprised, that's all." Ruby glanced down at the toe of her high-heeled green sandal, then looked up again. She was smiling—that smile that seemed to indicate she knew something very amusing which she was keeping to herself.

Mattie Saunders' fingers crashed down on the battered piano keys once more and Tony's accordion caught the melody. Steve said to Ruby, "Dance this one with me?"

"I'm sorry, I can't." She went on, drawing the words, "I'm awfully sorry."

Gale supposed it was Phil whom Ruby had promised to dance with, but instead, a squarely-built, bulky figure loomed beside her. Ed Vogel said, "Come on, Ruby," and the girl stepped into his arms. They danced away together, Ruby looking back, smiling, over his shoulder.

"Want to dance?" Steve asked. Gale said, "I'd rather not. Don't you think it's awfully warm in here? Is there any place where the air isn't so stuffy?"

"Let's take a look," Steve said. He led the way to a smaller room at the front of the building, a sort of entrance. It was deserted now. A single globe hung from the ceiling, lighting the room rather dimly. At one side there was a counter where occasionally, soft drinks were sold. The wall behind it was decorated with calendars and window cards advertising various beverages. But there was nothing for sale tonight.

Steve said, "Like this better? It's cooler, anyhow."

"Much better," Gale agreed. "I'll get some chairs."

GALE stopped him. "Don't bother," she said. "Look, we can sit here." She swung her self up to the broad ledge of the window. Steve took his place beside her.

The music, coming from a distance, sounded less strident. Steve, looking down at the girl, hummed the melody softly. He said, slipping his hand over hers, "Well, have you been having a good time?"

Gale nodded, smiling.

They were silent a few moments. Then, Steve went on, "You look awfully pretty tonight, Gale. Did you know that? You're the prettiest girl here."

"Silly!"

"But it's true. There isn't one of them who can compare with you for looks. Not one!"

Now was the time, Gale thought, to tell him what she had made up her mind to say. She had tried to say it earlier in the evening, had put it off. But there was no use delaying any longer. Steve had been so patient, waiting for her answer. He had proven himself over and over again, his fine qualities, his devotion. And Steve was the man she was going to marry.

Her fingers, clasped in his, tightened. Gale said, almost in a whisper, "Do you remember—?"

Almost as she spoke the last notes of the dance tune ended and the shuffling feet came to a halt. There was a buzz of voices from the room within, a buzz that grew louder. Suddenly, a single voice rang out, shrill, high-pitched. A man's voice, angry, defiant.

Gale sprang to her feet, the color gone from her face. "It's Phil!" she said.

Phil Henderson's voice rose again from the room beyond. "Let 'em try to stop me!" he shouted. "Just let 'em try it!"

Gale caught Steve's arm. "We've got to do something!" she said. "Oh, Steve—"

Without waiting, she ran into the dance hall.

on the question, and Attorney General Carl E. Bailey was asked for an opinion interpreting Amendment 7 to the constitution providing for initiative and referendum.

The constitutional amendment provides:

"All measures initiated by the people whether for state, county, city or town, shall be submitted only at the regular election, either state, congressional or municipal, but referendum petitions may be referred to the people at special elections to be called by the proper official, and such special election shall be called when 15 per cent of the legal voters shall petition for such special election."

Hempstead's representatives in both houses, Emory A. Thompson and L. L. Pilkinton of the House of Representatives, and John L. Wilson, of the Senate, voted against legalization of liquor.

Thompson's Bill

deferred action on the bill until this afternoon.

"The law of averages is the fundamental law of the insurance business and the Arkansas legislature has no power to repeal that law," said Leigh. He complained the bill would give the insurance commissioner practically unlimited power over fire insurance companies and said that under the present law the commissioner "has full authority to examine the companies books at any time and at their expense."

Mr. Leigh said that if the bill passed it would be possible or a future commissioner to regulate local rates to such an extent that "if a city bought 500 feet of hose and the ballot boxes came in right, its insurance rates might be reduced 10 per cent."

"Did you tell the Lord about your being so bad and ask his forgiveness?" inquired the mother as she opened the closet door.

"No," responded the little girl, with determination; "I didn't think you would want such a scandal known outside the family."

LAXATIVE WOMEN NEED Must Be Safe

Because of certain organic conditions, women need laxatives more frequently, and must avoid discomfort of ordinary laxatives. That is why delicious Fennema's, the chewing gum laxative, is better. Because you chew Fennema's, it is moved with helpful salivary juices, just like your food and goes into the stomach evenly. There is no mass of laxative to sit upon the stomach, and it is not an undigested mass. Fennema's is a thorough for women, yet always gentle, for its results are achieved by the modern scientific action of chewing. Thus intestines are more normally stimulated, rather than forced. Doctors prescribe the Fennema's Laxative. Delay is dangerous. Today, get Fennema's and say there—without habit formation, without drastic, or strain. Chew delicious Fennema's. 15c and 25c.

The day will bring some lovely things—
We say it over each new dawn;
Some day, adventurous thing to hold
Against our heart when it is gone.
And so we rise and go to meet
The day with wings upon our feet.
We come upon it unaware,
Some sudden beauty without name,
A snatch of song, a breath of pine,
A poem lit with golden flame:
High-tangled bird notes keenly thinned
Like flying color on the wind.
No day has ever failed us quite;
Before the greyest day is done,
We find some misty purple bloom
Or a line of crimson sun.
Each night we pause, remembering
Some gay, adventurous, lovely thing.

3 Farm Boys Are Freed by Hamilton

Desperado Angered by Police Ambush Youngsters Report

DALLAS, Texas, (AP)—Elusive Raymond Hamilton released three farm boy hostages near Fort Worth, Texas, late Monday and resumed a flight from the law reminiscent of the tactics used by his late partner in crime, Clyde Barrow. The youths, J. C. Loftice, Buster Mayes and J. C. Harlow, returned to their homes near Celina, Texas, in Mayes' car, without reporting to police.

Hamilton and an unidentified companion evaded a police trap near McKinney, Texas, Sunday night, fleeing before a barrage of gunfire. The farm boys were kidnapped soon afterward and the outlaws took the trio on a dash toward Fort Worth in Mayes' car.

At Celina, Buster Mayes said Hamilton was wounded slightly in the face but that his companion escaped the volley of gunfire. The boys said Hamilton was "with only a few bullet holes in his hat."

Probes to Damage School, Says Frank

Wisconsin U. President Warns of Creating "Terror Atmosphere"

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. (AP)—Glenn Frank, president of Wisconsin university, warned Tuesday that campaigns against "radicalism" in the schools may create an "atmosphere of terror" which would impair the educational usefulness of the institutions and their teachers.

His own university is to undergo its second legislative investigation for purported radical activities among students and professors.

"I can't see any grounds for that. An investigation was held two years ago but they found nothing."

Today public education goes "on trial" before a jury of its own choosing.

Liberals and conservatives will attack and defend each other's views but there will be no verdict in the "jury panel" discussion of "social change and education conducted by 11 public school leaders. The group is headed by John W. Studebaker, United States commissioner of education.

In his address to the convention Dr. Frank blamed education in part "for the breakdown of political, social and economic organization" and attacked the national planning of the present.

Relief Bill Crisis

cost of the works program by $2,340,000,000, that the public works program would never be "consummated" as long as that amendment remained.

"There is sound reason for the distinction the president makes between prevailing wages and wages to be paid in work relief," Robinson asserted.

"The object, after all, is to get rid not only of destitution relief, but all forms of work relief—to take the government as soon as possible out of the business of giving employment to these out of work."

"The only way to do it is to make private employment more attractive than federal employment. You are proposing exactly the reverse and in some instances to make federal employment more attractive. If that principle prevails, you haven't a chance of consummating this plan."
